Bid to end crisis continues Israeli shelling kills 20 in Beirut

BEIRUT. June 21 (Agencies) — A total of 20 persons were killed and 75 others wounded Tuesday by Israeli artillery and gunboat shelling of west Beirut and the city's southern suburbs, a hospital source said.

The shells hit the working-class residential area of west Beirut and civilian zones in the southern suburbs. The shelling continued for nearly 12 bours.

Economic sanctions, arms ban

LUXEMBOURG, June 27 (R) - The European Economic Community (EEC) is considering economic sanctions and a ban on arms sales to Israel because of its invasion of Lebanon, British Foreign Secretary

Francis Pym Said Tuesday.
Foreign ministers of the 10 EEC states held discussions Monday night on the crisis. Pym told a press conference afterward there had been no final decision about any direct action against Israel by the community, as advocated by some of its members, particularly Greece. But he said economic sanctions and a ban oo arms sales were both under consideration: EEC leaders would discuss the Middle East crisis further at summit meeting due to take place in Brussels June 28 and 29, Pym

The Israelis are hoping that southerners will soon return to Tyre and Sidon, but the two bombed cities still present scenes of widespread devastatioo, with the main street of Sidon lined with charred office blocks and shell-sbattered shop fronts.

The petrol shortage caused by the invasion has left some refugees stranded along difficult mountain tracks.

Dollar scales new high

Gold breaches $300 level LONDON. June 21 (R) - The relentless advance of the dollar showed no sign of slackening Monday as it made substantial gains against other major currencies and pushed gold below $300 an ounce to its lowest in almost three years.

The German mark fell to a 10-month low of 2.4890 marks, the French franc slumped to a record low of 6.8960, and sterling dropped blow $1.72 for the first time in five months. Gold, depressed by the alternative attractions of high dollar interest rates breached the $300 level. It was fixed in London at $297 and later fell to $296.15 — about $100 less than its price when the year began and with some dealers predicting a further drop to $250. The firmness of U.S. interest rates, which have opend up a large gap with rates in Europe and Japan, again dominated nervous markets, raising fears in some centers such as

The dollar's continued surge on world money markets, is prompted, operators said. hy expectations of more money in the pockets of United States consumers.

Higher consumer spending, the argument goes, means that firms will want to borrow more money to invest in order to meet the bigher demand, with the result that interest rates will continue to rise, thereby stimulating the dollar.

Just 10 days ago, the budget compromise between the United States Congress and the White House calmed interest rates, because a smaller budget deficit would mean less government demand for funds on a limited capi-

The dollar retreated briskly, sending the West German mark surging abead. This in turn sparked the currency exchange shake-up in the European Monetary System. But with experts agreeing that the U.S. economy is about to surface from recession, the demand for funds is expected to swell, pushing interest rates up and with them the dollar.

This is in accordance with the wisbes of the independent U.S. federal reserve, which wants to keep the money supply down. But many government officials and businessmen fear the negative effect of a surging dollar on U.S. exports.

At the same time. Washington is against government intervention on the currency market to control dollar fluctuations, and this encourages speculation in the U.S. currency. Consequently, financiers have been investing in the dollar rather than in gold.

Meanwhile, the fall in the gold price Monday to the lowest in 34 months and has dealt another blow to the mining industry in South Africa.

It means more than a quarter of the republic's 47 gold mines are now operating at a loss, gold share analysts told Reuters.

The prospects for South African producers, which account for almost 70 percent of non-Communist world's gold output, are gloomy and many mines will have to consider closure should the price not rise in the next six months, they said. -

Gold has become a victim of the current world economie elimate in which the dollar has attracted money from all quarters because of the firmness of U.S. interest rates. while world inflation is generally declining at a time of recession.

Thatcher, Reagan to mull Falklands

WASHINGTON, June 21 (R) - British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher will visit Washington on Wednesday to discuss the Falklands dispute with President Ronald Reagan. National Security Adviser William Clark said Monday.
Clark told a State Department conference on inter- American affairs that President Reagan had Sunday night invited Mrs. Thatcher to the White House for talks and she had accepted. Clark said the United States had stood ready to help to resolve the Falklands conflict between Britain and Argentina and "we stand by ready to help to assist the reconciliation that must occur." He said Mrs. Thatcher would be in New York for the current United Nations disarmament conference and the president had invited her to meet him. "She is coming in Wednesday to discuss this very issue (a resolution of the Falklands conflict)." Clark relations with Buenos Aires. hut Clark Monday described this as only a temporary interruption. He said Washington wanted to strengthen ties with Argentina and all its hemispherie neighbors.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Thatcher took formal steps Monday toward serting up an official inquiry into the causes of the 10-week conflict. The government did not disclose the form of inquiry Mrs. Thatcher had in mind. In Buenos Aires, the ruling military junta renewed attempts Monday to break the deadlock over a successor to President Leopoldo Galtieri, ousted after Argentina's defeat in

Withdrawal offer rejected

Iran to continue fight against Iraq

TEHRAN, June 21 (Agencies) — Ayatollah Khomeini said over Iranian radio Tuesday that the announced withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Iran was not in itself enough to end the war between the two countries.

He said that the withdrawal announced in Baghdad by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein "is one of our conditions, and as long as the other conditions we have laid down are not satisfied, we will continue the war." One Iranian condition named previously was for Iraq to pay colossal war damages and for the ousier of Saddam.

Among other conditions, the Iranians have asked for the punishment of the aggressor -which means the overthrow of the Saddam government. "The Iranians won't rest until Saddam is gone and there is nothing others can do to save him," one Western diplomat said in Loodon.

Apart from vowing to continue the war, Ayatollah Khomcini is also said by Iranian sources to be increasing his backing to Iraqi dissident movements to overthrow Saddam's Baarhist government, Iraq's Islamic Da'wah Party has close links with the Khomeini government and the sources said support was being extended to Iraq's Kurdish rebels.

Diplomats in London said Iran can once again claim to be the major power in the Gulfafter a 20-month war that has re-established its dominance over Iraq. The virtual surrender of the Iraqis has given the Iranians a position of strength from which they can dictate terms.

Western diplomats also said they believed Iran would continue to keep up pressure on Iraq with ctoss-border shelling but they doubted whether the Iranian forces would invade.

Analysts said that by removing his army from Iranian territory, Saddam was reducing sharply the amount of pressure Tehran could bring to bear on Baghdad. President Saddam indicated as much when he said in his speech that the ruling Revolutionary Command Council (RCC) had taken the decision to withdraw "to remove an important pretext being used by the notorious regime in Tehran to continue the war."

Saddam also cired Israel's invasion of Lebanon to arrack Palestinian commandos and a summir meeting of the nonaligned movement scheduled to be held in Baghdad in September as reasons for the RCC decision. The analysis said that the president, known as a strong leader, appeared to be fully in control of his country at present. But Western diplomats in the Middle East have been saying they believe Saddam could face a testing period because of the effective failure of his 21-month-old military venture against Iran.

JEDDAH, June 21 — Jeddah will soon have a very large storage capacity available under an ambitious warehouses area' project undertaken by Jeddah Chamber of Commerce and Industry. The two-million square meter area is located 10 kilometers away from the sea port.

Allocation of land plots to merchants which began two years before, is now near completion and construction is expected to start in Ramadan. Many of the warehouses are expected to he ready within four ro five months, said Chamber Deputy Secretary General Rashad Damanhury.

He told Arab News the project was carried out in two stages. Under the first, one million square meters area had been allocated to 200 businessmen for constructing 336 warehouses. The halance one million square meters is heing dishursed under the second phase for open warehouses, where the trader has to build the wall only. The first stage is over and now limited area is available from second stage, Damanhury says.

The chamber has recently decided to reduce rent for the warehouse area to SR3 per square meter from the SR5 fixed earlier, said Damanhury. Allottees will have to construct the warehouses within one year and according to the general conditions laid down by the chamber.

The specifications for one-story huilding warehouses put forward conditions for structural elements, roofing, walls, foundatious, infrastructure and flooring. They can huild up to 60 percent of the area in the first stage, said he.

IMISIU awards SR62m contract

RIYADH. June 21 (SPA) — A SR62 million contract was signed here Monday by Dr. Abduliah Abdul Mohsen Al-Turki, rector of Imam Muhammad ihn Saud Islamic University, for constructing the university's Sharia (Islamic law) and Language College in Qasim. A national firm will huild the faculty on a 32,000-square-meter area within 30 months.

The four-storey huilding will comprise a basement for the public services and ware-houses. The three other floors will include a lecture hall, restaurants, and waiting rooms and 60 rows of seats, in addition to 240 rooms for the teaching staff and student activities. The lecture hall can accommodate more than 1.200 persons.

Creation of the sharia and language faculty had been sanctioned under the university's 1981/82 hudget, but a royal decree decided to split it in two. Therefore, it is not yet known whether the new huilding will be for the sharia faculty or the language faculty.

For fire protection measures, the chamber states that the administration has arranged a network with hydrants, but fire warning in the store network should be arranged by the user and in cooperation with the fire hrigade.

The user also should take necessary precautious for fire hazards according to the combustibility of stored material. The user should commit to the regulations of the Civil Defense, and should distribute at least one chemical fire comhating device for every 100 square meters, he added.

He said the chamber will look after the administration of the area. It will huild a water tower for around-the-clock supply. Tenders for constructing the tower have been invited. The chamber is now thinking of taking up another area north of Jeddah near Ohhor. The new project may come up in a year. The new site would be allocated to car dealers, he added.

Government in exile ruled out by PLO

BEIRUT, June 21 (Agencies) — The alestine Liberarion Organization (PLO) uesday ruled out the idea of forming a govrument in exile "for the present".

The rejection followed an invitation made fonday to the PLO by Egyptian President losui Mubarak to set up new headquarters in airo if it were ousted from Beirut. authoritative Palesnnian sources said the LO already functioned along the lines of a tate with the executive committee in the role f government. It also had a two-chamber 'alestinian assembly: the National Council parliament) with 365 delegates representing Il resistance, local and trade union organizaions and the central council.

Secondly, the decision to form a governnent in exile could only be taken by the PLO executive committee or the central council and neither of these bodies could meet for the present due to the encirclement of west Beirut by the Israelis.

Lastly, the present Middle East situation aid not justify the creation of a government in exile. Although Israeli forces were maintainng their pressure on west Beirut, the war between Israel and the Palestinians was not over and "today military considerations have precedence over politics."

In another development. Mubarak said in an interview published Monday that U.S. hesitation over an Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon was badly damaging Washington's reputation in the Arab world.

In a television interview with the American Cable News network published in Cairo newspapers, Mubarak said: "U.S. failure to assert its power over Israel (on the Israeli invasion of Lebanon) has badly damaged America. I told President Reagan in a letter that the U.S. will lose more ground here."

East economic interests lay with Arab countries "regardless of your relationship with Israel." The Egyptian leader did not elabo-

And apparently referring to the Soviet Union, he said the longer Israeli forces remained in Lebanon "you (the U.S.) will lose more ground and the other powers will gain more.

Mubarak rejected as "a had idea" suggestions to send a U.S. force to man the Lebancse-Israeli trucelines. He said he believed the superpowers should not be involved in such a force.

'Israel executes war prisoners'

GENEVA, June 21 (AFP) - Israel is physically liquidating Palestinian and Lebanese prisoners captured during the Israeli offensive in Lebanon at the Be'er Yakov Camp near Tel Aviv. Daoud Barakai, the Palestine Liberation Organization's (PLO) permanent observer at the United Nations here charged Monday in a statement

Barakat said the prisoners were being questioned and tortured prior to heing executed. He said the International Committee of the Red Cross had not been able to obtain information on the prisoners nor had it been allowed to visit them.

From the committee's headquarters here, it was learned that committee representatives had only been able to visit Syrian prisoners.

Reagan working on policy, says Weinberger

WASHINGTON, June 21 (AFP) ---Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinherger Monday criticized the Israeli invasion of Lebanon and said President Ronald Reagan was "concluding right now on what our policy will be."

Speaking on the ABC Television network, Weinberger said: "We cannot condone or support the idea that you can change a situation by unilaterally resorting to violence." Comparing the current Lebanese situation to the Falklands crisis, Weinberger said the U.S. had supported Britain to condemn Argentina's use of force, "We have no control or advance knowledge of unilateral military action (by Israel), but we should bave the opportunity to dissuade anybody to resort to military force," said the secretary of defense, who criticized Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin for not making more of an effort to use diplomatic channels.

Weinherger's comments were the most severe criticism of Israel by a member of the U.S. government since the invasion on June 6. Weinberger said the Reagan administration was examining the possibility that Israel had broken U.S. law by using military material in the invasion supplied by the United States. "Thousands of people that have nothing whatever to do with it," had been killed, Weinberger said emotionally.

Weinberger added: "The president is developing and concluding right now on what our policy will be, and it will be reported in the coming days."

The Pentagon chief said that before U.S. troops were sent as part of a peacekeeping force to Lebanon "there would have to be many turns and conditions that have not yet been addressed."

A PLOY TO GAIN TIME

What is clear so far is that Israel is making use of the time available to its forces around Beitut in order to improve its position, in readiness for the linal onslaught on the city. It is equally clear that it has already obtained the green light from the U.S. for that onslaught. All the talk of ceasefire and otiations is mercis a ploy to gain time.

On the other hand, it is also certain that the Palestinians and Their allies in West Beirut will resist to the end, with all the means available, and to the last drop of blood. The outcome itself is no longer of any importance. This means that a massacre of huge proportions will engulf all the sides to the struggle, as well as the civilians remaining in the city.

The negotiators in the meantime are working on several alternatives. There is for instance a call for the Palestinians to hand over their arms to the Lebanese army and to leave Lebanese soil to work their future moves elsewhere. There is also an Egyptian call for them to form a government in exile in Cairo, so that they can become a party, under Egypt's wing, to the Camp David agreements. But here the reports from Israel "peace" process. say that the PLO will never be acceptable as a party in the

Some reports from Beirnt indicate that the Palestinians Exhemselves insist on retaining a strong political, diplomatic and informational presence in Lehanon, but through a deal which includes complete withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon. The U.S. is vehemently opposing it.

All these options and negotiations remain unconvincing as attempts to find a solution for the present tragic impasse face difficulties and as long as the Israelis keep tightening the neose around Boirut in residiness for a final assault.

Hyperinflation reached four figures and the military stepped in again in 1976 to launch a determined anti-guerrilla campaign and bring the economy under control.

Economy Minister Jose Martinez de Hoz sought to apply a strict monetarist policy by letting interest rates be freely ser by market forces, opening up imports and maintaining a high rate of exchange for the peso, but increased military spending and the failure to trim an overgrown public sector undermined his goals.

Yasser Arafat: The symbol of Palestinian struggle for homeland When he addressed the U.N., he proclaimed he bore an olive hranch but he also wore a leather gun holster at his hip. He called for a multi-racial state in which Muslim, Christian and Jew could live rogether in peace.

ARAB NEWS- JEDDAH

Born in Jerusalem in 1929, the young Yasser joined his father and hrothers in fighting Jewish terrorist organizations while still in his teens. After the creation of Israel in 1948 he went to Gaza. From there he moved to Cairo to study engineering and in 1952 he became president of the Union of Palestinian Students in Egypt.

Avaiat graduated in 1957, after fighting hongside the Egyptians in the Sucz war the previous year and then moved to Kuwait where, together with school teacher Salah Khalaf, still his righthand man, be created Fatch. The name was co posed by reversing the Arabic initials of "Palestine Liberation movement," but it also means "conquest' in Arabic. In 1964, then President Ahmad Ben Bella of Algeria authorized Fareh to open a bureau in Algiers and on the last day of the same year Fateb's military hranch, known as Al-Assifa, launched its first operation against Israel.

His activities soon put Ahu Ammar in trouble with the authorities of his host countries. He was arrested once in Lehanon and twice in Syria, spending seven weeks in the dreaded Mezze jail in Damascus.

After the 1967 Arah-Israeli war he established secret cells of Fatch within occupied territory, somehow evading the grip of Israeli security, which declared him one of its most wanted men.

By the early 1980s Arafat appeared to have chosen moderation to further the aims of his movement. It has looked increasingly likely that he would push for the establishment of an independent state in the West Bank and Gaza, a policy that could bring him into conflict with radicals still intent on the complete destruction of Israel.

At the same time as maintaining his contacts with Arab leaders and the PLO's supporters in the Soviet bloc, he bas sought to extend his influence in Europe. But diplomacy has remained just one part of Arafat's task. As this month's Israeli invasion of Lehanon has shown, he is still a commando leader.

Meager funds, lack of health education

Pakistan war on

By Rahimullah Yusufzai

ISLAMABAD (Depthnews) - Pakistan's health planners are worried about the inclfectiveness of its anti-tuberculosis program. From the president down to the lowest rung uf health officials, everyhody is harping on the same tune; coordinate efforts of all agencies concerned and integrate programs. But enthusiasm peters out on the implementation stage, which in turn, is described as highly unsatisfactory. Officials admit that Pakistan has fairly lagged behind in its fight against TB even compared with other developing countries. Tuberculosis control is described as "midway through," which probably means a 50 percent success.

A preventable and curable disease, TB remains a major killer in Pakistan. It is still the fourth major health problem and about half the country's 80 million Pakistanis are feared infected with TB. To date, only two national TB prevalence surveys have been made. The first was conducted in 1960-62, the second in 1974-77. The latest survey showed that 1.0 percent of the population suffered from TB, Only in one age group, the 5-9, was a decrease from 23 percent to 13 percent recorded. Adult groups have the same level of intection two decades carlier.

Both surveys showed that 7 out of 10 Pakistanis, at 20 years old and above, are already infected with TB, some of them becoming infectious cases in five years.

Clearly, the national TB control program drawn up in 1965 has failed to make much headway. Critics say the national program was haphazardly planned and hadly organized. For intance, while TB cuntrol was initially planned in four phases, lack of progress in the first phase disillusioned all involved.

BCG vaccination, the main weapon currently used in preventing the disease, covered 34 million people in the last 30 years. Critics say the figure is not impressive enough. Among the country's 33 million children, for instance, yearly BCG vaccination covers only one million. At this rate, critics say it will be impossible to reach the desired target of vaccinaling 70-40 percent of the people.

Training of medical manpower, which was zealously undertaken in the last decade, is now a forgonen affair. The program still drags on but without proper supervision. Doctors are reluciant to become TB control officers, calling the position "unattractive."

Even doctors and health planners are unable to agree on the most effective and economical method of new case-finding - a controversy over the years. An clite group of the National Tuberculosis Association, called the Chest Specialists' Panel, advocates mass miniature radiography (MMR) for early case finding. Its supporters say many more cases could he detected at the shortest possible time by using MMR. However, critics say it is expensive, needing frequent repairs and an additional vehicle to transport the instrument. They believe TB could not be identified with certainty through X-rays. They point out that the World Health Organization (WHO) recommends sputumsmear microscopy for case finding.

Sputum-smear microscopy involves the collection of sputum from suspected patients. smearing it with chemicals, and culturing it in a laboratory where TB infections are detected by the microscope. It is described as the quickest and the cheapest method. although sputum culture also requires trained technicians and special laboratories. MMR. on the other hand, is costly and requires specialist interpretation, besides giving wrung conclusions in certain cases.

Another major impediment is lack of funds. Money is needed to set up dispensaries, pay health care personnel and, above all, to huy drugs. Deployment of meager funds available is also a prublem, more so in a country where priorities are not fixed and corruption is deeply rooted, even in the health services. Presently, there are 108 chest clinics and 4.500 hospital heds fur TB patients. This

TB 'midway through' includes six sanatoriums, built in hills and city outskirts with hetter surroundings and clean air. Although some places still lack TB clinics, all major general hospitals now have TB wards. However, the quality of services at the sanatoriums has hopelessly deteriorated, due mainly to lack of specialists and funds. Hospital beds are often vacant, because of misconception that hospitalization, special diet and complete rest offer no advantage, nor do they shorten the duration of treatment. In fact. considerable psychological advantages are attributed to home treatment in familiar surroundings, besides being less expensive. Thus, the sanatoriums keep losing patients and their earlier importance. If the TB control program were to be effectively integrated into the general health services, it could count on the available facilities of 548 hospitals. 715 maternal and child health clinics. 137 rural health centers, along with 369 sub-centers and 3,000 dispensaries.

However, despite the large number and diversity of these health outlets, their role in the TB control program is doubtful. Integration remains a mere wish. District health officers complain they are so busy with a host of responsibilities that they couldn't devote any time to the anti-TB campaign. As reporting uf fresh cases in the district and basic work is the responsibility of the overburdened district health officers, the program is grounded before the take-off. There is also hardly any coordination even among various concerned departments. Compared to inadequate government effort, the voluntary agencies have fared no better, except making their presence felt with occasional lashes in the press. Too many tuberculosis seminars and conferences are held, where planners and doctors share the limelight and pharmaceutical firms display their new products. Recommendations, too, keep coming in, often depicting different viewpoints.

However_nubody bothers to throw light on the implementation aspects of tuberculosis control. "Better not touch the weakest link" seems to he the general consensus.

Recommendations regarding tuberculosis control are aplenty. Almost all of them stress health education, increased BCG vaccination, free treatment of patients, availability of lucally manufactured cheap drugs, proper training of doctors and technicians and incentives for serving in remote areas. Almost everyone involved with tuberculosis control is convinced that health education plays a significant role.

Lack of health education gives rise to the misconception that TB is not a disease but a social stigma. It is stressed that at least half the fight against TB - starting from casefinding right down to the last dose - could be fought and won with one single weapon: health education.

East-West space flight scheduled for Thursday

MOSCOW (R) - One French and two Soviet cosmonauts soar into space this week on a joint ventute conceived in the heady days of detente, but now taking place despite French reservations.

Lt. Col. Jean-Loup Chretien, 43, and two Soviet colleagues will blast off Thursday for nine-day spin in space which Soviet officials had hoped would cement good ties with France and underwrite the gains of detente.

The flight will be the first East-West manned space flight since July 1975 when a Soviet Soyuz craft linked up with a U.S. Apollo craft in space. But times bave changed and France, against a hackground of cool hilateral relations, has indicated it wants to do all it can to stop this week's flight becoming a political propaganda exercise for Moscow.

Indeed, there have been several hints since the heginning of the year that President Francois Mitterrand and his Socialist government were considering recalling Col. Chretien and his understudy, Patrick Baudry, in spite of almost two years of preparation at Moscow's "Star City" training

The French government finally allowed the joint mission to go ahead, but insists it should be billed purely as a step in scientific cooperation. From the French at least. there will be nothing to suggest that relations are any warmer than they are, and Paris has indicated that it will not be associated with any political gestures by Moscow during the flight.

Col. Chretien, an air force test pilot, will blast off on Thursday (1630 GMT) aboard a Soyuz module with mission commander Vladimir Dzhanihekov and engineer Alexander Ivanchenkov. Just over 24 hours later, they will dock with the orbiting Salyut -7, a space laboratory which has been manned since May 14 by a two-man Soviet advance team of Lt. Col. Anatoly Berezovoy and Valentin Lebedev.

The mission marks an extension of the Soviet-sponsored "Intercosmos" program of joint flights which up to now bas heen confined to Moscow's Communist allies. One of the factors which helped dissuade the French from calling off the mission was an official feeling that France can gain as much from the mission's scientific experimental program as Moscow.

Foremost in this program is a medical scanning of the vital organs of the crew throughout the entire trip. The monitoring, known as ecography, will be carried out hy French technology and the results will serve to show whether a human being can live indefinitely in a condition of weightlessness. An allied series of experiments will be conducted on the body structure of the five cosmonauts. Non-medical research will include photographing corners of space not possible from earth and tests on metals in space, a field in which the Soviet Union has much experience.

Both Soviet and French officials see the benefits as deriving from a combination of French technology with the massive practical experience in space huilt up by Moscow over the past ten years.

Equipment for the experiments has already been laken on hoard the Salyan from a progress cargo craft and is being given preliminary tests by the advancemew. The mission will be directed from the Soviet space control center at Kaliningrad, just north of Moscuw, which is equipped with a giant computer capable uf processing a staggering 25 million questions per second.

The flight ends July 2 when Col. Chretien and his two Soviet colleagues return to earth, landing southeast of Alka-Lyk in Kazakhstan, Soviet Central Asia.

The late French President Geurges Pompidou and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev agreed on the project in 1973. Mitterrand's predecessor, Valery Giscard d'Estaing, put it in motion.

But relations visibly cooled with the arrival of Mitterrand whose government, though remaining committed to the pruject. has signaled its determination to handle it in a low-key fashion. In a reaction to the imposition of martial law in Poland last December, France gave instructions that the mission should be limited to the sphere of scientific cooperation.

French sources in Moscow said Suviet officials privately expressed disappointment verging on anger at this attitude. At a recent press conference. President Mitterrand said the flight would go ahead as planned, adding that France wished to improve its relations with the Soviet Union. But he added that he did not plan "to wipe the slate clean of the Afghanistan affair and neither of the Polish one."

The French government, accordingly, is not sending any officials to attend the launch at the Baikonur center. And though the two Frenchmen are expected to receive state awards from the Soviet Union on completion of the mission, there are no plans for similar awards from France.

The French government has given orders to minimize the ceremonial and nonfunctional aspects of the project while informed sources in Paris say Col Chretien has been told to watch what he says in space.

Weinberger echoes Haig

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said Sunday that an "unprecedented" series of strategic missile tests by the Soviet Union tast week looked like a scenario for fighong a nuclear war.

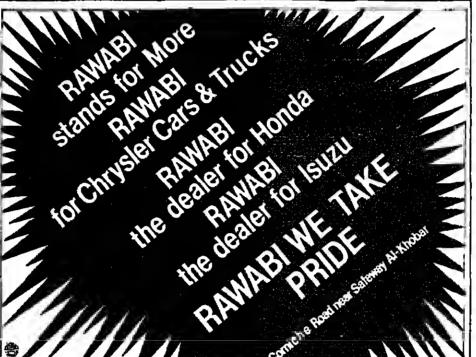

Secretary of State Alexander Haig accused the Soviets Saturday of conducting the tests. He claimed the Soviet action helied the arms control proposals made by the Soviets last week at a U.N. conference on disarmament.

The tests, which took place in stages, reportedly involved an anti-satellite weapon. the launching of intercontinental and seabased hallistic missiles and the firing of two anti-hallistic missiles that successfully intercepted two incoming missiles.

In an interview on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley." Weinherger called the tests an "unprecedented display" of Soviet military strength.

Weinherger said the purpose of tests might be to "send out a signal...that no matter what they say, they still have this growing and immense arsenal of strength that underlines all our points...That there is no way we can maintain a credible deterrence without modernizing our forces."

When asked whether he agreed with the assessment that the tests "tooked like a scenario for fighting a nuclear war," Weinherger said. World Bank aide says

Poor states hold key to ending recession

WASHINGTON, June 21 (AP) - Poor countries can and should help pull rich ones out of recession, says the chief economist of the World Bank - an organization that traditionally tries to get rich nations to help the

Helen Hughes, head of the bank's economic analysis department, says that in the recession of the mid-1970s it was the poor countries of the southern hemisphere "that pulled the north out of the trough."

The poor countries can help recessionplagued nations by dismantling import barriers. More orders from the poor countries for industrial products and machinery would stimulate business and create new jobs in the rich countries.

Mrs. Hughes' thinking follows that of William E. Brock. the U.S. trade representative. Brock said in a recent speech that the United States already sells more of its manufactured goods to the poor countries than it is sells to all of Western Europe and Japan combined.

Brock says the poor countries should open their markets in return for promises from the United States and other industrial countries not to set up new barriers to their products. Mrs. Hughes, an Australian, says the industrial couotries now charge an average tariff of about 5 percent of the value of the goods they import. In Latin America, the tariffs average 30 percent to 40 percent.

"Trade barriers are dangerous to the developing countries themselves, as well as to the industrial countries in the north," she told reporters last week at a World Bank conference. "The developing countries that have the highest barriers are the one that have grown the least."

Mrs. Hughes says some of the countries that have been growing less poor are "liberalizing" their imports by dropping tariffs, eliminating import quotas and getting rid of other trade barriers. She cited countries in the Pacific basin, specifically South Korea and Taiwan. "The debate is raging in Indonesia," she added.

Mrs. Hughes said the World Bank can finance some of the increased purchases of goods from industrialized nations through its $13 billion a-year loan program.

The World Bank makes loans at virtually no interest to the poorest countries. The money for these loans comes from a fund to which the United States and 32 other countries contribute.

Coal regains pride of place in France

PARIS. June 21 - In France, coal is coming back again. And, wherever possible, home-produced coal. This was decided by the government and approved by parliament during the great debate on energy and fuel which took place in Paris last October.

One idea which obsesses France is that of her independence in fuel and power. And now she is rediscovering a source of power which people had perhaps "forgotten" a little too quickly, It is now being generally admitted that this fuel independence can be found in the splitting of the atom, certainly, but also in seams of coal deep in the earth.

The "back to coal" campaign and particularly French coal is thus one of the key elements in the government's fuel-and-power strategy, in the same way as the campaign for saving fuel, plans for using nuclear energy more and the control of oil supplies. The first decision was to develop the consumption of coal. The target is fixed at a level of 53 to 60 million tons per year between now and 1990. The objective is to increase threefold the consumption of coal, in the iron and steel industry.

Tin prices shoot up

LONDON, June 21 (AFP) - Tin prices shot up 600 pounds a tin in trading Monday from Friday's five-year low to 6100/6150 pounds for three months delivery following reports that Far Eastern producers were planning moves to force prices higher by forming a producers cartel. Malaysia, it was said, agreed to join the new tin agreement, while at the same time forming a producers' cartel with Indonesia and Thailand, dealers in Lundon said the price would not be allowed to fall to last year's levels, which were well below the cost of production.

AP unveils electronic darkroom

DALLAS, June 21 (AP) - The Associated Press unveiled the minielectronic darkroom Sunday, saying the desk-top equipment can be a building block for technological advances in news gathering.

In the short run, the portable electronic darkroom will mean enhanced photo quality for members of the AP, said Dave Rutherford, the AP's chief engineer. To news paper readers, the darkroom will mean better photographs.

Darkroom eventually may lead to quicker transmission of photographs over the AP's laserphoto network.

It will allow transmissions from negatives to the AP darkroom in as little as 30 seconds, Rutherford said. Current technology requires eight minutes to move a photo print over the laserphoto network. and the electronic darkroom may lead to technology that will reduce that time.

A television camera can be booked directly into the mini-darkroom, producing a photo that can move on a network within two minutes. However, the quality of such photos is not as good as conventional photographs, Rutherford said.

The AP's first mini-electronic darkroom - a computer that fits under onehalf of a desk, a video display terminal and a television screen - was demonstrated at the American Paper Publishers Association production management conference

The equipment allows for simultaneous reception of photographs. Each photo is converted into about 2.5 million bytes of information in 256 levels of gray,

With credit demand rising

U.S. interest rates may soar

NEW YORK, June 21 (R) - Mounting pressures to the U.S. financial system are expected to push U.S. interest rates higher in coming months and some money market analysts and economists oow believe these factors may well result in a credit crunch.

In forecasting continued high interest rates through most, if not all, of 1982, economists at Aubrey G. Lanston and Co. said the possibility of further business failures and major financial strains in the commercial paper and Eurodollar market may result in cutting off financing to less credit worthy borrowers.

Chase Manhattan Bank economist Philip Braverman noted that already the credit markets are beset by a broad spectrum of negatives which threaten to push yields well above the current distressed levels.

In the bank's latest Capital Markets Report be wrote that in addition to weak technical factors, the credit markets continue to be burdened by business short-term and longterm borrowing.

Bravennan noted that business loans are rising at the same time the treasury's borrowing is stepping up sharply, and in addition, the overhang of corporate bonds now is at a record $25 billion.

Braverman said that concerns over bankruptcies, creditworthiness and liquidity are mounting even as the economy is beginning to show signs of recovery.

"Although a recovery should begin soon, it is not likely to be either strong or sustained with this rise in rates," Braverman said, adding "indeed, a credit-liquidity crunch is now a distinct possibility."

The adverse impact continued high interest rates already has had on corporate profits is evidenced by an ever-increasing reduction in corporate quality ratings.
In the latest "Comments on Credit" Salomon Brothers Ine economists noted that during the first five months of 1982, two indepeodent rating agencies, Standard and Poor's Corp. and Moody's Investors Service Inc. have quickened their pace of reducing the credit ratings of U.S. corporate bonds.

Analysts agree that two factors primarily are responsible for the expected rise in interest rates, namely large treasury borrowings and the Federal Reserve's monetary policy.

Elliott Platt of Donaldsoo, Lufkin and Jenrette Securities Corp said these factors will force real interest rates to remain at historically high levels and preclude the cut in nominal interest rates that the disinflation process would otherwise generate. In the firm's most receot issue of Money Notes he said the severe erosion of bond prices over the past four weeks reflects the growing realization that both real and nominal rates are likely to remain extremely high for an extended period of time.

The Lanston economists base their outlook for higher interest rates oo heavy federal government credit demands associated with an excessively loose fiscal policy.

Investcorp to woo

BAHRAIN, June 21 (R) — The Arabian Investment Banking Corporation (Investcorp), which aims to encourage international investment by the Gulf countries, was formally launched bere Monday with an authorized capital of $500 million.

A 17-member board of directors was elected, led by former Kuwait Finance Minister Abdul Rahman Salem Al-Atiqi.

Investcorp's president - and chief executive officer Nemir Kirdar told Reuters operations would commence early next year, when an office would be opened in London.

The organization will offer regional investment banking services and opportunities for international investment, Kirdar said. He did not think lower income from the region's oil exports because of price and production outs would effect investment.

EEC lifts curbs on Argentina

LUXEMBOURG. June 21 (AFP) — The EEC foreign ministers Monday formally ended community's economic sanctions against Argentina with effect from Monday. They were imposed on April 10 when Argentina occupied the Falkland Islands, now retaken by Britain. But the European Economic Community (EEC) countries, who halted arms deliveries to Argentina, will

Freight rates touch new low

LONDON, June 21 (AFP) - Further reductions were made by ship-owners last week on the weakened freight market, despite talk of a return of Soviet charterers after a two-month absence.

The price cuts were most noticeable in the grain trades, with rates on the U.S. Gulf Japan route dropping to a 30-month low of $17 for 30,000 tonners and $16.25 for 50,600 tonners. In the trans-Atlantic trade a 24,000 tonner accepted $7.50 (down 50 cents)/ton equivalent to the low for the year souched in February.

Out of the U.S. Atlantic coast a 24,000-ton grain cargo was hooked to Morocco at only $10/ton, down a massive $7.75 on the previous week's business.

Halt in the fighting in the South Atlantic brought out more inquiry for the River Plate. but rates were nevertheless far from steady, despite the reported presence of Soviet oper-

- The abundant amount of tonnage available meant that a 20,000-ton grain shipment to Mexico was fixed at $35/ton, down $2. Latest Soviet grain purchases from Argentina were said to be between 800,000 tons and one million tons, for shipment between July and September. The Soviet

Tapioca shipments continued to attract great interest from Thailand as operators attempted to beat the June 19 deadline in exports. One 150,000 bnlk carrier was known to have been fixed to Europe, while another vessel (around 125,000 tons) was believed fixed on a lump sum basis of $1:35

To shatter Nicklaus' dream

Watson grabs maiden U.S. title

PEBBLE BEACH, California, June 21 (AP) — Tom Watson won the United States Open Goll Championship Sunday for the first time, scoring a two-stroke victory after destroying Jack Nicklaus' dream of a record fifth title with a dramatic, chip-in birdie on the 17th hole. Watson, with a 2-under-par 70 in the final round, posted a winning of 282.

The dramatic turning point came on the 17th hole, one of the most spectacular holes on perhaps the most beautiful course in the country, the famed Pebble Beach Golf links. Playing a half-hour and two holes behind the mighty Nicklaus. Watson tied with him a four shots under par when he went to the tee on the par-3 hole with the green on a peninsula that juis into Carml Bay.

Nicklaus had finished his play and was watching on television when Watson pulled his tee shot into ankle-deep rough between two bunkers on the left. With the pin tucked close to that side. Watson was staring straight into the gloomy face of bogey, a bogey that would drop him a stroke off the pane.

But he lofted the little chip over the wet rough that separate him from the putting surface, crouched as the ball began to run to the cup and went sprinting around the green as the ball disappeared in the hole for a birdie. Nicklaus, holder of a record 17 major professional titles and sharing the record of four U.S. Open titles, rode into contention on a string of five consecutive birdies on the front side, tied for the lead with a birdle on the 15th and appeared to have it won - or at least have a spot in the playoff - when he finished

Chinaglia sees Cosmos through

EAST RUTHERFORD, New Jersey June 21 (AP) - Giorgio Chinaglia scored his 11th goal of the season with just 2:24 remaining to lift the Cosmos to a 3-2 victory over the Seat-tle Sounders in the North American Soccer League action Sunday.

Chinaglia's goal came on a header after Steve Hunt sent a long cross into the hox from the left touchline. Andranik Eskandarian passed the ball to Huot and was awarded an assist on the game-winning goal.

Mark Peirson opened the scoring for Seattle just 21 seconds into the game. Steve Daley and Peter Ward assisted.

The Cosmos, 12-3, tied it up 45 seconds into the second half when Chico Borja tallied with help from Chinaglia and Vladislav Bogicevic.

Seattle took a 2-1 lead at 69:59 when defender Jeff Stock scored his first goal of the season by heading in a corner-kick by Dalelm, The Cosmos deadlocked the game at 2-2 when Steve Moyers took a pass from Carlos Alberto and whistled an 18-yard shot rhat deflected off the right post and into the Seattle goal at 78:27. In another game Tampa Bay Rowdies

Lance Parrish hit a bases-empty homer off Slaton in the Detroit third, making it 5-2 Tigers. Simmons beat out an infield hit in the Brewers' fourth and rode home on Oglivie's second homer of the day. After two were out in the Milwaukee sixth, Simmons and Oglivie each hit solo shots off Ujdur to lift the Brewers into a 6-5 lead.

When Oglivie came to hat with Cecil Cooper on second in the eighth, he was given an intentional walk by Detroit reliever Dave Tohik. Roy Howell then drove in Cooper with a single for the Brewers' final run.

Jerry Augustine, 1-2, who came on with two out in the third, gained the victory with relief help in the eighth from Rollie Fingers, who picked up his 15th save. In other American League action, pinch-hitter Joe Nolan's two-run homer in the 11th inning snapped a 3-3 tie and gave Baltimore a 5-3 victory over New York.

Roo Hassey's bases-loaded single with one ton with the winning run to give Cleveland a 5-4 victory over Boston. Dave Engle hlasted a two-run bomer and Gary Ward bit a solo sbot and doubled to help Minnesota beat Texas 4-1.

Reggie Jackson set up a two-run rally with a single and stolen base and later slugged his 13th bomer as California beat Chicago 3-1, Dave Revering drove in two runs with a homer and a single as Toronto came from bebind to nip Oakland 3-2 and sweep their three-game seriea. In the National League, Tony Pena's tworun double snapped an eighth-inning tie, and Rick Rhoden pitched a no-hitter for 61-3 innings to lead Pittsburgh to a 3-1 victory over Philadelphia.

Jack Clark smashed a solo bomer, and Joe Morgan added a two-run shot as San Francisco trimmed Atlanta 5-3. Ron Roenicke and Ron Cey slammed solo home runs to support Jerry Reuss' seven-hitter, carrying Los Angeles to a 4-2 triumph over Cincinnati.

John stearns slugged a two-run triple off Bruce Sutter with one out in the 10th inning. lifting New York to a 5-4 victory over St. Louis. Al Oliver blasted a two-run homer and a pair of singles, and Tim Wallach capped a five-run fifth with a three-run homer to lead Montreal to an 11-5 victory over Chicago.

LONDON, June 21 (AFP) - Steve Ovett, Britain's Olympic 800 meters champion and 1500 meters world record holder, failed to turn out in Sunday's Southern Counties 1500 meters final after winning his heat Saturday.

Ovett told championship secretary Eric Nash that he was still feeling sore after his heat and did not want to risk any complications. It was Ovett's first race of the season after an absence of eight months due to injury. He won his heat in three minutes 47.25 seconds — 16 seconds outside his world mark.

Meanwhile, in Knoxville Tennessee, the United States seems at last to have found pole vault specialists, in Billy Olson and Dan Ripley, who set a new national record in the annual National Championships Sunday.

Spectators at the Tom Black Stadium at the University of Tennessee saw both men add a centimeter to the previous national best to clear 5.72 meters, only ten centimeters lower than the world record held by Vladimir Polyakovs of the Soviet Union.

Ripley, like Olson, was the first to thrill the crowd with a first vault of 5.62 meters. He kept his remaining two jumps for the oext height, and though he failed the first, he cleared 5.72 with his last attempt. Olson, credited with the world best indoor performance of 5.74 since last winter, responded immediately with a matching jump.

The Texan and Californian then went for the world record and both narrowly missed at their second attempt. They refused a jumptitle and record. Apart from the pole vault, about the only event to excite spectators on the third and final day of the championships was the women's 1,500 meters. Mary Decker led by a good 40 meters after the first lap and went on to set the world's best performance of the season, a time of 4:03.47. With greater competition she might have done better still. But the 23-year-old was pleased with her

U.S. title, only the second of ber career and eight years after the first, the 800 meters in 1974. She had been keen to make a mark over 1,500 meters before the European season. She said: "This season my aims are the world records in the mile (4:20.89 by Ludmila Veselkova of the Soviet Union) and 5,000 meters (15:08.26 by berself)."

Sbe added: "I feel capable of getting under 15 minutes in the 5000. In the meanwhile, I will attack the mile record at Oslo next

One other world best performance of the season was set Sunday by Jamaica's Merlene Ottey, who ran the women's 200 meters in 22.17, the fifth best performance of all time. Other record results included Cliff Wiley's 45.05 over 400 meters, James Rohinson's 1:46.12 over 800 meters, David Patrick's 48.57 in the 400 meters hurdles, Henry Marsh's 8:22.94 in the steeplechase and Denean Howard's 50.87 sec. in the women's 400 merers.

VALENCIA, Spain, June 21 (AP) -Hometown hero Enrique Saura came off the bench and two minutes later scored the winning goal in Spain's 2-1 triumph over Yugoslavia in a World Cup Group Five soccer match here Sunday night.

The goal was far from classic, but proved enough to finish off the hrave Yugoslavs, who earlier had conceded a hotly - disputed penalty. Jnanito crossed from the right and Quini miskicked. But Saura was on hand at the far post to steer the ball into the net.

The teams had been level 1-1 at halftime after Juanito had scored the controversial 13th minute penalty to equalize Jvan Gudelj's 10th minute opener for Yugoslavia. The penalty was given by Danish Referee Henning Lund-Sorensen for a fonl that appeared to bave been committed outside the penalty arca.

But the Danish official thought otherwise and awarded a spot kick. Lopez Ufarte missed the first shot, but the referee ruled goalkeeper Eragan Pantelic had moved illegally. Juanito took the second kick and buried the ball in the net.

MADRID, June 21 - The sunshine footballers of Brazil are roasting themselves happily in Spain, while other World Cup players might prefer to transfer the location to leeland.

The heat is the subject of criticism in some dressing rooms, not to mention medical precautions and attention.

lts energy destroying power is exposing the hanging tongues of more than a few runaway European players who often chase around inexhaustably and are now feeling like drained Marathon runners. You don't hear many complaints from the Latin American players who perform with greater physical economy partly because they prefer the hall to work more than the legs and also because they learn from boyhood how to preserve their energy in the sun. The climate is always spotlighted hy some teants for different reasons at World Cups. In Argentina it was the damp, chilly winter season when Cafe Du Brasil was the top seller at games instead of soft drinks. In Mexico, 1 recall, it was altitude problems handicapping some players.

The English are keeping a scientific record of their players' reaction to Spanish heat. They weigh them before and after games and later give them extra liquids to regain lost pounds. During the game with France, the English striker Mariner lost 11 pounds (over five kilos, would you believe?) and the team's average loss was just over six pounds (three kilos) per player.

This was about the same weight as the new daughter of England midfield star Robson, boin two days after father had scored two goals in the defeat of the French. Despite the England fatigue, it was significant that Ron keeper Luis Arconada claimed that Ivan

Opening lead - nine of clubs.

There are many worthwhile conventions that enable a good defensive pair to score all the tricks they're entitled to make. Some players ignore these conventions, relying more on instinct than science, but this is a dangerous way to play the game. Take the present deal, which features high-class partnership defense. West leads a club, East winning dummy's queen with the ace. East, correctly diagnosing the lead as a singleton, returns the three of clubs, ruffed by West with the deuce.

East's low club return, rather than any old club, is conventional. It says that, as between hearts and diamonds, he wants West to lead the lower-ranking suit next. Had East preferred a heart return, he would have played the eight of clubs to ask for the higher suit to be returned. Accordingly, West leads the diamond three to East's queen. and South's ace. Declarer plays a trump to dummy's jack and East's ace, and now East has a genuine problem.

If he thinks West has another trump, East should return a club; but if he thinks West has no more trumps, his only chance is a diamond return. With only his own 13. cards to rely on, East might go wrong and hand South the contract. But another convention, the trump echo, comes to his

West's ruff with the two of spades, followed later by the four, denies a holding of three trumps. If West had held the 6-4-2, he would have ruffed the club with the four and later played the deuce to indicate a third trump. East therefore returns a diamond at trick five, and four spades goes down two. With a club return, South would wind up making the contract.

Parleys put off on status of Gibraltar

Spain has been granted a postponement of its meeting with Britain on Gibraliar, scheduled for Friday iin Sintra Portugal, a joint communique here Monday from the two nations said. This means that Spain's fromter with Gibraltar will not be reopened Friday as planned. It was the second postponement of talks on the sovereignty of Gibraltar. The meeting was put back last April when the Falklands conflict broke out, in a joint statement in Luxembourg, British Foreign Secretary Francis Pym and Spanish Foreign Minister Jose-Pedro Perez-Llorea said the Falklands erisis had created a bad climate for the negotiations.

Pym said they would set a new date for reopening the frontier between Spain and Gibraliar, closed off by a fence since 1969. Spain has long claimed the British rock culony off the Spanish coast.

The joint statement said the two countries were attached to the principles of the Lisbon agreement of 1980 on normalizing links between Gihraliar and Spain. This agreement said the border would be opened when sovereignty negotiations began.

Pym said he was very disappointed by the new delay and the economic consequences it could have for Gibraltar. He said the situation would become critical if Spain joined the European Economic Community, Perez-Llorea said the delay was the "hest decision possible" to preserve the process begun by the Lisbon agreement.

Relatives distressed Argentina isolates returning POWs

PUERTO MADRYN. Argentina, June 21 (AP) — Anxious to minimize the bitter spectacle of Argentine war prisoners returning from the Falklands on British ships, the military junta is keeping the men isolated behind a heavy security screen.

But the curtain of secrecy is distressing relatives, who have come here trying to learn the fate of their loved ones. "I tried to take a woman from Santa Fe (in northern Argentina) to the docks, and then they wouldn't let her in. She doesn't know if her son is alive or dead. Now what kind of deal is that?" asked a cab driver, who took three journalists to a military checkpoint near the Soldiers armed with automatic rifles have scaled off the docks to all visitors, including relatives and journalists. The majority of the 10,000 or more prisoners of war due back from the Falklands after the surrender of the Argentine invasion force are being shunted to this snow-swept Patagonian port. about 1.062 kilometers south of Buenos Aires.

The first 4.200 war-weary troopers arrived here Saturday aboard the requisitioned British cruise liner Canberra. They reportedly were hustled aboard trucks and buses and whisked 64 kilometers south to a naval air station near the town of Trelew. Access to the Trelew Airport, which adjoins the base, has been restricted until Thursday, military officers said.

The field reportedly is being used by the military as a staging area to send the repat-riated prisoners back to their units before they will be given furloughs of war. The converted North Sea ferry Norland was expected Monday with more than 1.000 additional prisoners of war. Thousands of people lined the shore Saturday to watch the Canberra's arrival from a distance. Its appearance carried a note of irony since the Argentine military command claimed the ship was sunk during

WASHINGTON. June 21 (AP) - United States military planners, studying the lessons of the Falklands war, are voicing concern about the growing number of smaller nations with "the great equalizer" — new-generation smart missiles that increase the vulnerability of the world's great navies.

Even Brunei, a nation of about 200,000 persons on the coast of Bornen, has an arsenal of smart missiles. "Every nation that has the money to buy a smart weapon poses a considerable risk." says Adm. Harry Train Jr., commander of the U.S. Atlantic Fleet. "We know those missiles have a great capability to destroy warships."

In the Falklands war, the Argentine attacks on British ships with French built Exocets graphically demonstrated the power of the new weapons.

The major military powers no longer have a monopoly on new weapons. The Exocettype missiles are a popular item for any nation with money.

Military officials suggest that some nations buy smart missiles because the purchase gives them big-power status. The United States has sold many of its missiles to other NATO nations, which in turn are selling their own missiles to Third World countries.

Among the 24 nations that have the Exocct are Malaysia. Ecuador, Ghana. Kuwait and Abu Dhabi.

The sea-skimming Exocet, little known before the Falklands war, has gained a reputation as a wonder weapon, particularly after one devastated the British destroyer Shef-

"That's because these things had never really been fired in anger before," said a military industry spokesman who declined tn be identified. "Everyone in the military has known for years what these new smart missiles can do."

Meanwhile, the tools of war successfully used by the British in the Falklands conflict were displayed Monday at an army exhibition at Aldershot. London, with the makers expecting lots of foreign interest.

British Defense Secretary John Nott was opening the week-loog British army equipment exhibition of military expertise, services and technology and James Blyth, head of government arms sales said it will be the biggest of the four held to date.

At a press view Sunday, peace campaigners displayed the placards they plan to carry in a demonstration against the international arms

The Argentine news agency Diarios Y Noticias reported at the weekeod that returning Argentine soldiers captured in the Falklands complained they had no cold-weather clothing to match that used by their British captors, and that the British troops had "an overpowering technical superiority.

Some 230 companies and the government's armaments factories were parading their wares at Aldershot no a 13-acre site and up to 500 representatives from more than 90 cnumries were invited - including Argentina. The invitation went out before the April 2 invasion of the Falklands.

The display always attracts top military brass to inspect tanks, armored cars, artillery. missiles, communications equipment, lasers, training aids, buttons, badges and boots.

Fear of ship ban worries America

CANBERRA. June 21 (R) - The United States expressed concern Monday that its warships might be banned from South Pacific ports. Australian Foreign Minister Tony Street said.

Opposition labor parties in Australia and New Zealand oppose facilities for U.S. nuclear-armed ships, and several South Pacific island nations have raised the possibil-ity of banning nuclear ships as part of a policy to promote a nuclear-free Pacific zone.

Street told reporters the United States raised the issue on the first day of the two-day council meeting of the ANZUS pact. He said he had teceived the impression that a ban on U.S. ships "would make the maintenance of the ANZUS Treaty as we have known it of the greatest difficulty ... it is difficult to see how it could survive."

Earliet U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Walter Stoessel discussed the issue with Australian Labor Party leader Bill Hayden. who has said that if he became prime minister after elections due next year he would ban U.S. nuclear-armed ships from Australian

Cambodians set to sign coalition pact today

KUALA LUMPUR. June 21 (Agencies) - Former Cambodian head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk arrived here from Peking Monday to sign an accord on a coalition government with the two other anti-Vietnamese resistance leaders Tuesday.

Sihanouk is to sign the agreement with Khieu Samphan, president of Democratic Kampuchea, and former Cambodian Prime Minister Son Sann. The prioce has said he places no preconditions on joining a coalition and will go along with any agreement between Khieu Samphan and Son Sann.

China has urged the three resistance forces to unite as soon as possible to fight the Vietnamese and ensure that the ousted regime of Democratic Kampuchea will not lose its seat in the United Nations. China gives aid to all three factions and both Chinese and international aid is expected to increase after coalition is actually formed.

However. Malaysia will not provide the new coalition with military aid, Malaysian Deputy Prime Minister Datuk Musa Hitam said in Bangkok Monday.

Any attempt by the resistance forces to oust the estimated 200,000 Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea "would have to be done internally," Datuk Musa told journal-

The United States, Australia and Canada have also said they would not provide military assistance to the coalition, of which the Khmer Ronge, with about 30,000 men. is the main fighting force.

Meanwhile. Vietnam Monday warned the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) that the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge would dominate the proposed coalition of Cambodian resistance groups, creating a dangerous precedent for "Maoist" subversion and sabotage in the region.

ASEAN - the five-country grouping of Thailand, Malaysia. Singapore, Indonesia and the Philippines - has been promoting a coalitioo of the three factions to oppose the Victoamese troop occupation of Cambodia.

I met him, that friend of my not too wisely spent youth, the other day. Bored! was the first thing he said in reply to my question as to how he was. ·Very rich and very bored," was the second thing he said, trying to amplify the first. "A house in Miami, a suite in Monie Carlo hut so what? Bored, hored, bored.." I said he did much better in the old days, before the money poured in. Do-you remember Abu Farid, the local grocer?" said. That was the time when everytime you were bored you played that game of peace be upon you with him. Do you remember how he got his own back?" What happened at the time was there was this Ahu Farid, a mountain of a man, a very flabby and lazy giant, who sat all day in front of his shop. The game was that my friend used to pass by him on certain days. when nothing much was hap pening, to hid him a very formal greeting. The catch was that since the greeting was very formal Abu Farid had to get up to answer, something he loathed. The further catch was that my friend repeated the process around ten times within each half hour, positively going round in circles just to bid poor Ahu Farid the most formal of greetings, with me standing aside tom between embarrassment and laughter.

Finally Abu Farid had had enough. One day he waited for my friend to start the process, then allowed him to get well ioto stride. By the fifth time greetings were exchanged, Abu Farid pretended that he was about to close the shop. He was gathering his things when my friend appeared and started to utter his greeting.

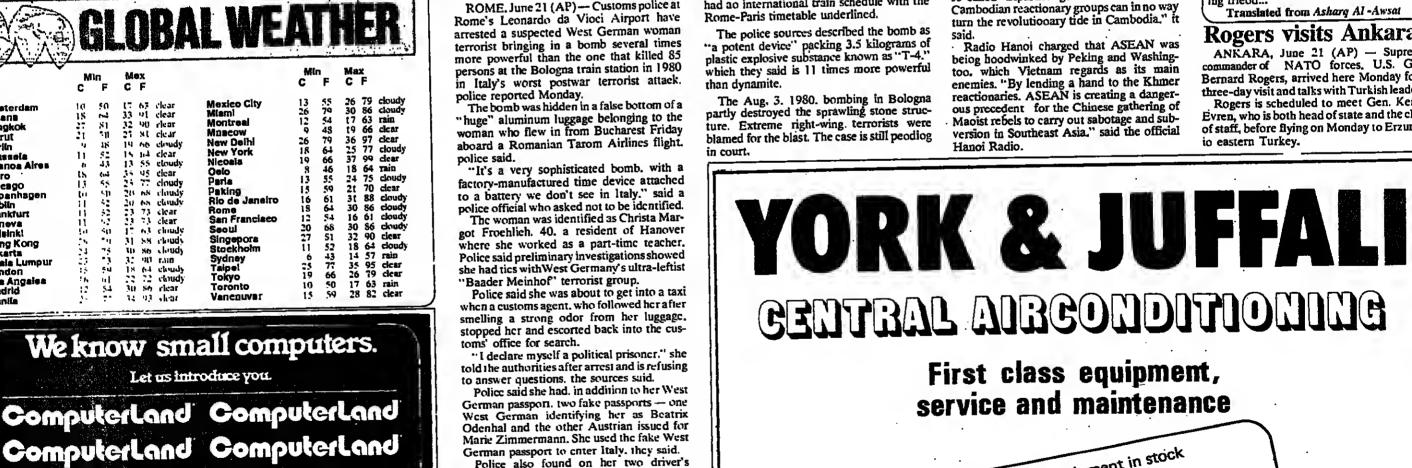

Cousin," said Abu Farid before the sixth salutation came out, "Do come and help me close the shop today. I just had news I was required immediately at home." My friend rushed over to his side and asked how he could be of help. "Just pick that iroo rod up and bar the door with it after me, while I get the lock ready."

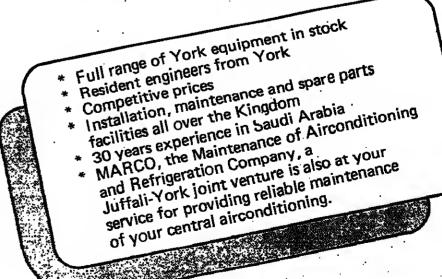

I watched my friend pick up the bar helpfully, then watched him dinp it and give a mighty shriek. A second later he was danciog in the street holding his hand and screaming abuse at Ahu Farid. That same Abu Farid who was by now reopen-ing the shop and saying to my friend, "Oh dear me, I must have forgotten that iron bar was too oear the open fire when I asked you to pick it up. Not much damage done, I hope. Aod, oh, go in peace little cousin and give my regards to your laugh ing frieod..."
